MARRIAGES AT FORT ST. GEORGE, MADRAS.

The Register books of St. Mary's, Fort St. George, begin in 1680, the year of the consecration of the church. The marriages, baptisms and burials for about eighty years are bound up together in one volume, which is of parchment. The entries from 1680 to at least 1730 are apparently in one handwriting. They are, presumably therefore, copies of the originals up to that date, and there is little doubt that in some instances mistakes have been made by the copyist. All names are here given exactly as they stand in the existing registers, any probable errors being indicated by a query inserted within brackets.

The first marriage to take place within the new building was Yale's. He married the widow of Joseph Hynmers, one of the Company's servants. She was the daughter of a Mrs. Anne Elford, of London, and her youngest son by her first husband bore the name of Elford.[1] He is mentioned in the records at Madras, under date 1685, as having a passage home provided for him and his brother by Elihu Yale.

From 1680 to 1694/5 the name of the person who gives the bride in marriage is recorded. At first it is "given," etc., afterwards he is called simply "Father." In eight of the earliest marriages the names of two "bridemaids" and two "bridemen" are added. These were not necessarily single men and women; Yale acted as brideman on three separate occasions after his own marriage.

In 1779 occur the first signatures of the contracting parties before witnesses. No printed form for filling in the registers was used during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

RETURNS OF MARRIAGES AT OUT-STATIONS IN THE PRESIDENCY OF MADRAS, RECORDED IN THE REGISTER BOOKS OF ST. MARY'S, FORT ST. GEORGE, BETWEEN 1783 AND 1805.

Before the victories of Eyre Coote in the Carnatic, the only out-garrisons of importance were Trichinopoly, Tanjore, and Cuddalore. These three stations were served in spiritual matters by Missionary-Chaplains, who kept their private register books of all the baptisms, burials, and marriages they solemnized. In 1782 the number of such garrisons and out-stations increased, and to each station of importance was sent a Civil Resident for political, commercial, magisterial, and revenue purposes. The Residents had authority from the Government to baptise, marry, and bury, and were ordered to send a return of all such events to Fort St. George. These were sent very irregularly between 1783 and 1793, when more stringent orders were issued on the subject,[385] and a registration fee instituted for the benefit of the Fort St. George Chaplains.

[385] See "The Church in Madras," pp. 405-8.

Many marriages must have taken place at out-stations before 1793 which are not registered at St. Mary's. A few can be traced in the mission register books of the places already mentioned, and of Palamcottah.

In places where there was a Civil Resident the marriages were performed by him. If the marriage was that of a soldier, the return was made and signed by the commanding officer. If there were no Civil Resident, the marriages were performed and the returns made by the commanding officer. When the Chaplains visited the various stations, of course they both solemnized the marriages, etc., and made the returns. After 1805, a Chaplain was stationed at the headquarters of each out-garrison, and kept a register of all the sacred events locally. With their advent, the registration of out-garrison events at St. Mary's ceased.

The entries have been made irregularly and without regard to time or sequence, as will be observed. They are given here in the order in which they occur in the books.
